History	Throughout the colonial period, Canada's vast and far-reaching territory was largely uninhabited. Living conditions were difficult. Harsh winters made travelling almost impossible and many villages were left isolated for months at a time. Automobiles were not yet invented, bicycles still decades away. To allow this country to thrive (as opposed to merely survive), to ensure that travel, commerce and development would flourish, a railway had to be built, one that would alter the course of Canadian and North American history. In 1867, the year of Canadian Confederation, a commitment was made by the newly-born country to build a transcontinental railway linking both coasts across 6,000 kilometres. The rest, as they say, is history. This railway would go on to play a fundamental role in shaping Canada's social and economic development. In the century that followed the launch of Canada's first public railway, thousands of kilometres of track were laid across the new country, acting

	as a binding force and playing a steadily expanding social and economic role. But the invention of the automobile, and shortly thereafter the airplane, reshaped an already rapidly changing society. The 1950's. In the postwar era, automobiles became more affordable and therefore more attractive to consumers, who enjoyed the freedom it gave them. This led to the construction of new highways and improvements to road networks throughout North America. Meanwhile airlines responded to growing demand by introducing more flights and new destinations across the country - all the while cutting fares. Little by little, governments abandoned passenger rail and instead invested huge sums in transportation by road and air. The 1960's. In 1967, Canada's two railway companies, Canadian Pacific and Canadian National, wanted to drop passenger services and only carry freight. Since the federal government considered passenger trains an essential service, it agreed that same year to cover 80% of the losses the two companies incurred with their passenger services. This funding, however, did not lead CP and CN to invest more in passenger trains. Service continued to deteriorate and ridership shrank. In fact, in 1967 - the centennial of a nation the railway built - Canada's passenger railway seemed to be on the verge of becoming a thing of the past. The 1970's. In 1977, the federal government led by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau took an unprecedented step in Canada. Inspired by the 1971 creation of Amtrak in the United States, it created VIA Rail Canada on the grounds that a Crown corporation with an exclusive mission to organize and provide all intercity passenger train services in Canada could really reduce costs and improve service. The 21st century. At the dawn of the third millennium, VIA Rail is clearly an essential entity: in addition to being a viable business, it continuously innovates. And above all, it has convinced millions of people that trains are "the more human way to travel".
Wi-Fi	VIA Rail provides complimentary Wi-Fi service on board most of its trains, in its Business station lounges and in select stations in the Québec City – Windsor corridor. VIA currently provides Wi-Fi mobile service only in the Québec City – Windsor corridor. “Good” to “very good” signal strength is offered within more than 98% of the coverage area determined by mobile partners. Users may experience weaker signal strength in the Trenton-Cobourg, Chatham-Kent and Hyde Park (London) regions of Ontario.

	How to connect <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Activate the Wi-Fi function on your laptop or mobile device.</li> <li>2. Launch your web browser.</li> <li>3. On board the train, first try to connect to “VIA_Connect_WiFi” if available, otherwise you can use “VIA_TRAIN”. In stations, select “VIA_Station” wireless network.</li> </ol>
On-Board Entertainment	VIA Rail has partnered with CBC/Radio-Canada, the National Film Board of Canada (NFB) and The Historica-Dominion Institute to announce the On-board Entertainment initiative, an interactive digital platform providing passengers on VIA Rail trains free access to Canadian programming. Starting in Spring 2013, the new interactive digital platform will provide passengers on VIA Rail trains within the Québec City - Windsor corridor free access to Canadian programming, including CBC/Radio-Canada TV shows programs, documentaries and animation from the NFB, and "Heritage Minutes" vignettes and Memory Project veteran interviews produced by The Historica-Dominion Institute. By offering VIA Rail customers the chance to watch movies, television shows and news programs presented in the country's two official languages, the On-board Entertainment system will promote high quality Canadian productions. VIA Rail's On-Board Entertainment portal is the only system of its kind on a train in North America. It will present movies and other programming from the NFB and CBC/Radio-Canada collections, in addition to regular daily newscasts from CBC/Radio-Canada. Over time, this interactive digital platform will host other Canadian content from participating organizations. The On-board Entertainment initiative required a total investment of over half a million dollars by VIA Rail. This program is part of VIA Rail's modernization plan launched in 2007, and was made possible by the nearly $1 billion in capital funding announced by the Government of Canada since 2007 to rebuild aging equipment, refurbish stations, upgrade infrastructure, improve accessibility and support critical information technology projects. About VIA Rail Canada
Responsible Travel	Protecting the environment is everyone's business - VIA Rail Canada takes this responsibility seriously and acts on it every day. While many already view passenger trains as an environmentally friendly transportation choice, VIA nonetheless works continually to improve the environmental performance of its operations. For this reason, an Environmental Policy guides VIA's commitment and daily business decisions. Major issues such as regulatory compliance or reducing fuel consumption and waste are managed using VIA's Environmental Management System (EMS), which establishes a

	working framework for tracking, evaluating, and communicating environmental performance. All employees are invited to become involved in VIA's efforts to protect the environment. The company's Environmental Planning Committee (EPC) is made up of representatives from every function in the organization, while volunteer-led Green Teams are spread out across the network, providing opportunities for employees to generate ideas, locally and nationally. Beyond policies and procedures, VIA's commitment to the environment expresses itself through concrete action. For some years now, VIA Rail has worked to substantially reduce its greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions even while expanding its operations. This commitment lives on today, as the company continues to look for more effective and creative means of further reducing fuel consumption. Gains were first achieved in the 1990s by modifying existing equipment, followed in 2001 by the purchase of 21 locomotives with increased fuel efficiency. In recent years, initiatives like the installation of new wayside electrical power systems have allowed for fuel-saving programs, like an engine shutdown program that eliminates idling time. VIA's latest pilot project has enormous potential to reduce the company's environmental footprint. A prototype for modernizing an existing fleet of 20-year-old locomotives (General Motors F-40) was completed in 2006. It is anticipated that extending this project to the entire fleet would result in fuel savings of 5 million litres yearly and an annual reduction in GHG emissions by 15 million kilograms. The program would extend these locomotives' useful life by 20 years and reuse 120 tonnes of steel from the basic structure. Moreover, the rebuild could be done at half the cost of buying new locomotives. These and similar programs are currently under review for possible implementation.
Accessible Travel	VIA Rail Canada prides and promotes itself as “The More Human Way to Travel.” Nowhere is this commitment more critical than in the provision of service to passengers with reduced mobility or other special needs. VIA has been recognised for the leadership role it has played over the past 25 years in advancing the cause of accessible public transportation for all Canadians. Over that period, VIA has established a constructive working relationship with a number of organisations representing disabled travellers. This has permitted VIA to make substantial and continuing improvements to its trains, stations and front-line services – ensuring best possible accessible transportation for travellers with mobility or other restrictions. VIA understands that some passengers' travel needs may differ from those of travellers in general. The range of special services (and

	adapted services) may vary from one region to another, depending particularly on station facilities and train cars. If VIA know about special needs in advance their staff will have time to do everything necessary to make the trip as comfortable and pleasant as possible. In order to do this, VIA asks that passengers with special needs purchase their tickets by telephone or at one of the ticket offices 48 hours or more in advance of departure, taking care to specify the special services required. These may include arrangements for wheelchair access, guide dogs, priority boarding, special meals, or an escort. Information and reservations: call toll-free: 1 888 VIA RAIL (1 888 842-7245)          People with speech or hearing problems may communicate through telecommunication devices for the hearing-impaired (TTY) by calling toll-free: 1 800 268 9503.          The full range of special services is outlined on their website at www.viarail.ca/planner/en_plan_beso.html Enabling people to travel with dignity: a well-trained staff is the reason VIA is at the forefront in providing superior customer service for the elderly, disabled and special needs passengers. Each year, almost one third of VIA's employees receive introductory or refresher training on how to assist passengers with disabilities. Training has taught staff to treat individuals with respect, to empathize as much as possible, and to ask the right questions. The best is often, "Tell me how we can best help you." VIA has for some time recognized the benefit of allowing travellers with specific disabilities to bring an escort of their choice, at no cost to them or their escort. This policy is designed for travellers who cannot tend to their own personal needs such as requiring assistance with eating, personal hygiene or medical care. This Free Escort Policy is unique in the industry. Similarly, a person may also be accompanied on trains by a service animal that is certified trained to increase the autonomy of the person with the disability. The service animal would have free access to an additional seat and not be restricted to the limited space under a seat. This is a policy that encourages people with special needs to travel.
